Tolerant

Are you tolerant? It is a big word is it not?

Do you know what it means? It means to be kind to others. To put up with others and to accept them as they are.

Are you tolerant?

Read the story and tell who is not tolerant and why.

"Ha, ha, ha!" Fred is left handed, laughed Katie. "Look how funny he throws the ball." "What is wrong with being left handed," said Jill. "Don't you think he looks funny? Look how funny he is when he throws the ball," said Katie. "But he throws the ball well and Daniel is hitting the ball with the bat," said Jill. "Well, I'm not going to play with him. He looks funny throwing the ball like that," said Katie and walked away. Jill picked up the bat and shouted: "Throw a good ball Fred!" Fred was hurt. He had heard what Katie had said but he swung his arm hard and threw a perfect ball. Jill took a big swing at it and the ball flew all the way to the other end of the playground right in front of Katie's feet. Fred and Jill cheered. "What a ripper swing," shouted Fred. "What a ripper throw," shouted Jill. "Well done, Fred," shouted Daniel. Katie was angry and kicked the ball away. She wished she could throw the ball as well as Fred.

Think about a time when you were tolerant.

Write a short story how you were tolerant.

Draw a picture showing how you were tolerant.

"I'm not very tolerant when it is dinner time!"
